

Get Out of Your College!

*Encouraging Students to Make the Most of
Their Cornell Experience*

January 31, 2017

Organizers: Charles Van Loan (Dean of Faculty) and Rebecca Stoltzfus (Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education)

Professor Catherine Appert
 Department of Music
 Faculty-in-Residence, North Campus

Fall

The Rhetoric of the Presidential Election
 This course will follow the 2016 election cycle, examining the rhetorical strategies of the candidates and the impact of the media on the election. This course is for students who are interested in the intersection of politics and communication. We will discuss the role of the media in the election and the impact of the candidates' rhetoric on the public.

The Science of Social Behavior
 This course will explore the scientific study of human behavior, focusing on the role of the environment and the individual in shaping behavior. We will discuss the role of the environment in shaping behavior and the impact of the individual on the environment.

Spring

Constitution
 This course will explore the role of the Constitution in shaping the American government and the impact of the Supreme Court on the Constitution. We will discuss the role of the Supreme Court in shaping the Constitution and the impact of the Constitution on the Supreme Court.

Fall & Spring

Be the Architect: Building a Life Worth Living
 This course will explore the role of the individual in shaping their own life, focusing on the role of the individual in shaping their own life and the impact of the individual on the world. We will discuss the role of the individual in shaping their own life and the impact of the individual on the world.

Cook Community Engagement: Bridging Self, Community, and World
 This course will explore the role of the individual in shaping their own life, focusing on the role of the individual in shaping their own life and the impact of the individual on the world. We will discuss the role of the individual in shaping their own life and the impact of the individual on the world.

Learning Where You Live
 courses are . . .

- mostly one- and two-credit, pass/fail courses
- taught close to home on North and West Campuses by faculty involved in these residential communities
- a great way to meet other students

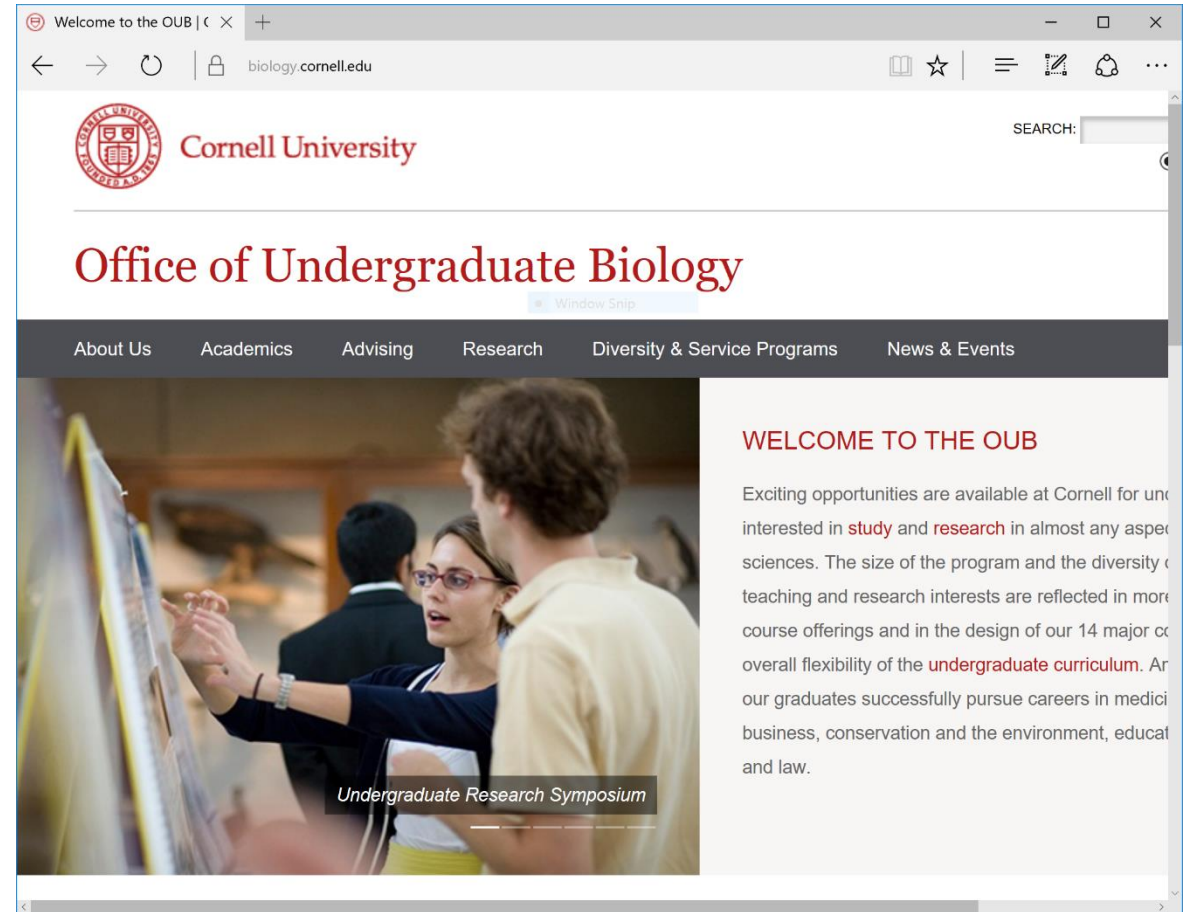

Most are open to you, regardless of where you live. Register for them just as you would for any other courses.

Learning Where You Live
 2016-2017

Want to explore an interesting subject in an informal and convenient setting?
 Want to get to know a fantastic, friendly professor?
 Still looking for an extra credit or two?

DURING ORIENTATION
 Social Sciences Center, 110 Thurston Hall
 Learning Where You Live, 110 Thurston Hall
 Social Sciences Center, 110 Thurston Hall
 Learning Where You Live, 110 Thurston Hall

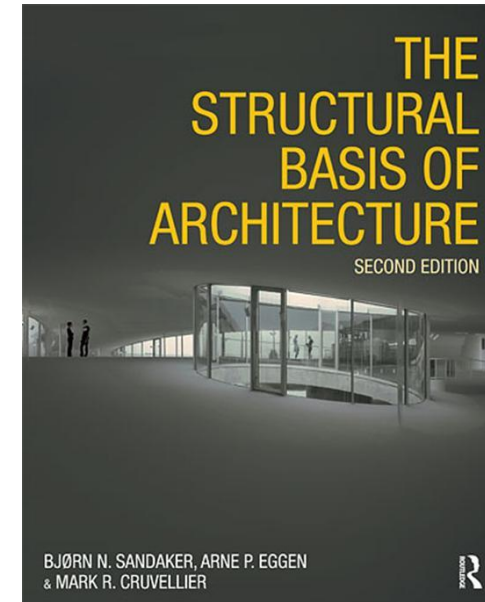

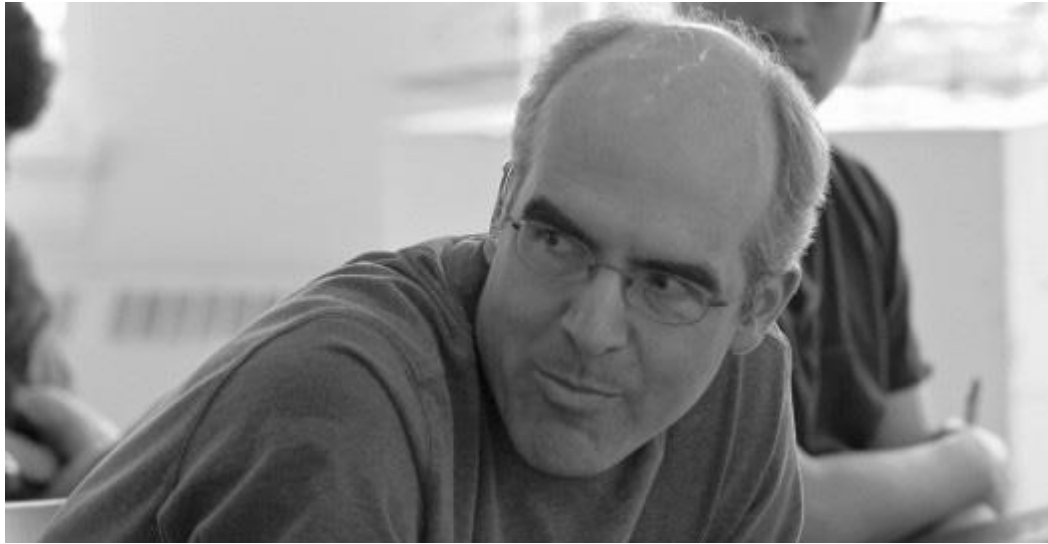

Bonnie Comella

Director of Advising, Office of Undergraduate Biology

Assistant Dean and Director of Advising, Arts and Sciences (Starting February 1)

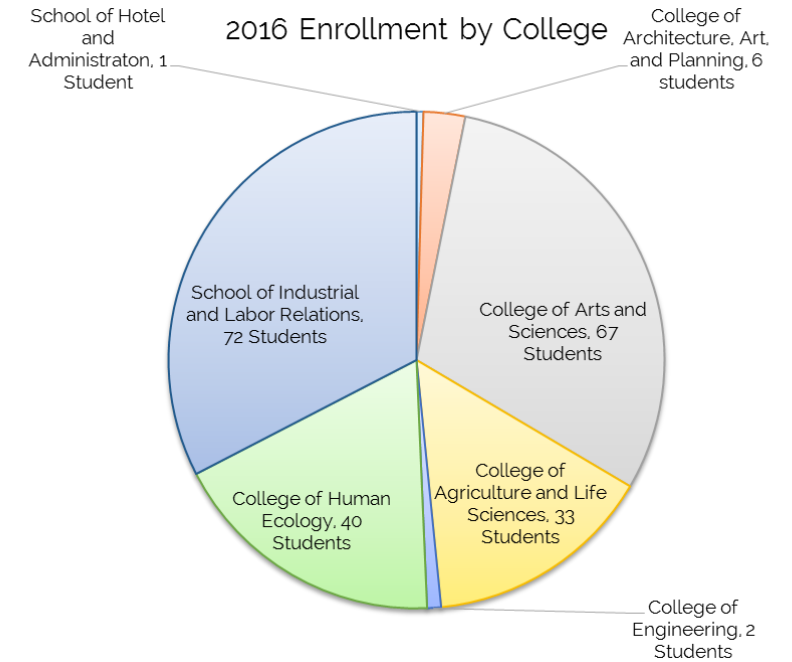

Professor Mark Cruvellier
Department of Architecture

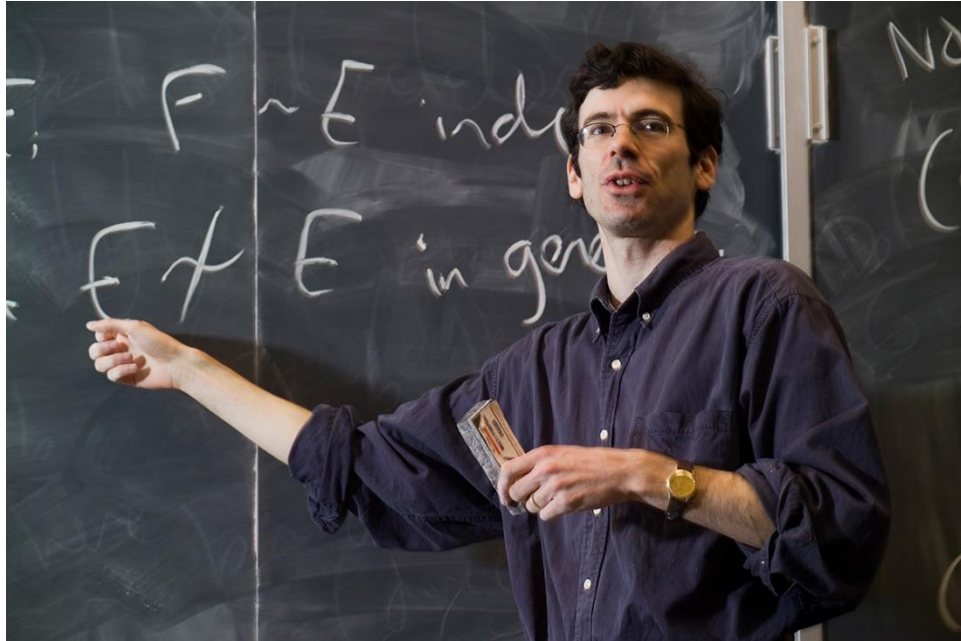

Professor Anna R. Haskins
Department of Sociology

- ◉ Social Inequality (SOC/PAM 2208 and DSOC 2090)
- ◉ Comparative Social Inequalities (DSOC 3700 and SOC 3710)
- ◉ Race and Public Policy (PAM 3370 and SOC 3370)
- ◉ Families and Social Inequality (PAM 4470 and SOC 4470)
- ◉ Economic Analysis of the Welfare State (ILRLE 4426 and ECON 3450)
- ◉ Managing Diversity: Policies and Practices (ILROB 6260)

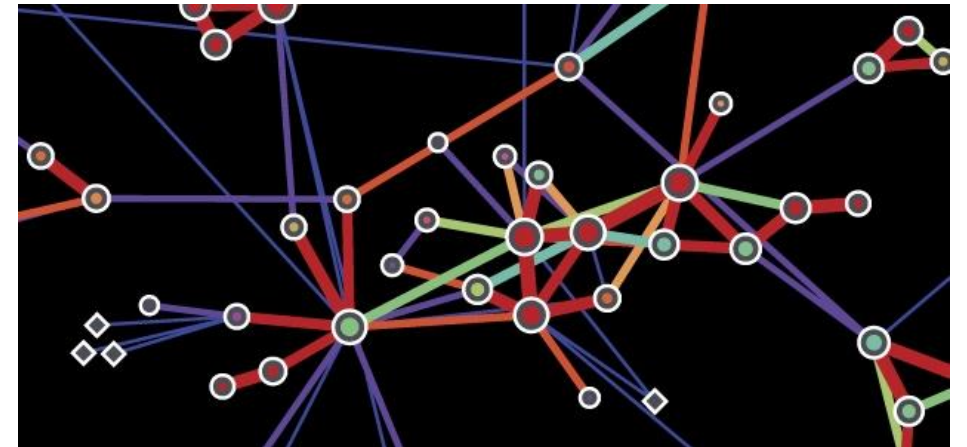

Networks

Economics 2040 / Sociology 2090 /
Computer Science 2850 / Information Science 2040

Professor Jon Kleinberg

Department of Computer Science

Department of Information Science

Get Out of Your College!

*Encouraging Students to Make the Most of
Their Cornell Experience*

January 31, 2017

Organizers: Charles Van Loan (Dean of Faculty) and Rebecca Stoltzfus (Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education)

Professor Catherine Appert
 Department of Music
 Faculty-in-Residence, North Campus

Fall

The Rhetoric of the Presidential Election
 This course will follow the 2016 election cycle, examining the rhetorical strategies of the candidates and the impact of the media. This course is for those who are interested in the intersection of politics and communication. We will discuss the rhetorical strategies of the candidates and the impact of the media on the election process.

The Science of Social Behavior
 This course will explore the scientific study of human behavior, focusing on the role of the environment and the individual. We will discuss the scientific methods used to study human behavior and the implications of the findings for our understanding of the world.

Spring

Confinement
 This course will explore the experience of confinement, from the perspective of the individual and the community. We will discuss the historical and contemporary contexts of confinement and the impact of the experience on the individual and the community.

Fall & Spring

Be the Ancestor: Building a Life Worth Living
 This course will explore the concept of legacy and the impact of our actions on the world. We will discuss the historical and contemporary contexts of legacy and the impact of our actions on the world.

Cook Community Engagement: Bridging Self, Community, and World
 This course will explore the concept of community engagement and the impact of our actions on the world. We will discuss the historical and contemporary contexts of community engagement and the impact of our actions on the world.

Learning Where You Live
 courses are . . .

- mostly one- and two-credit, pass/fail courses
- taught close to home on North and West Campuses by faculty involved in these residential communities
- a great way to meet other students

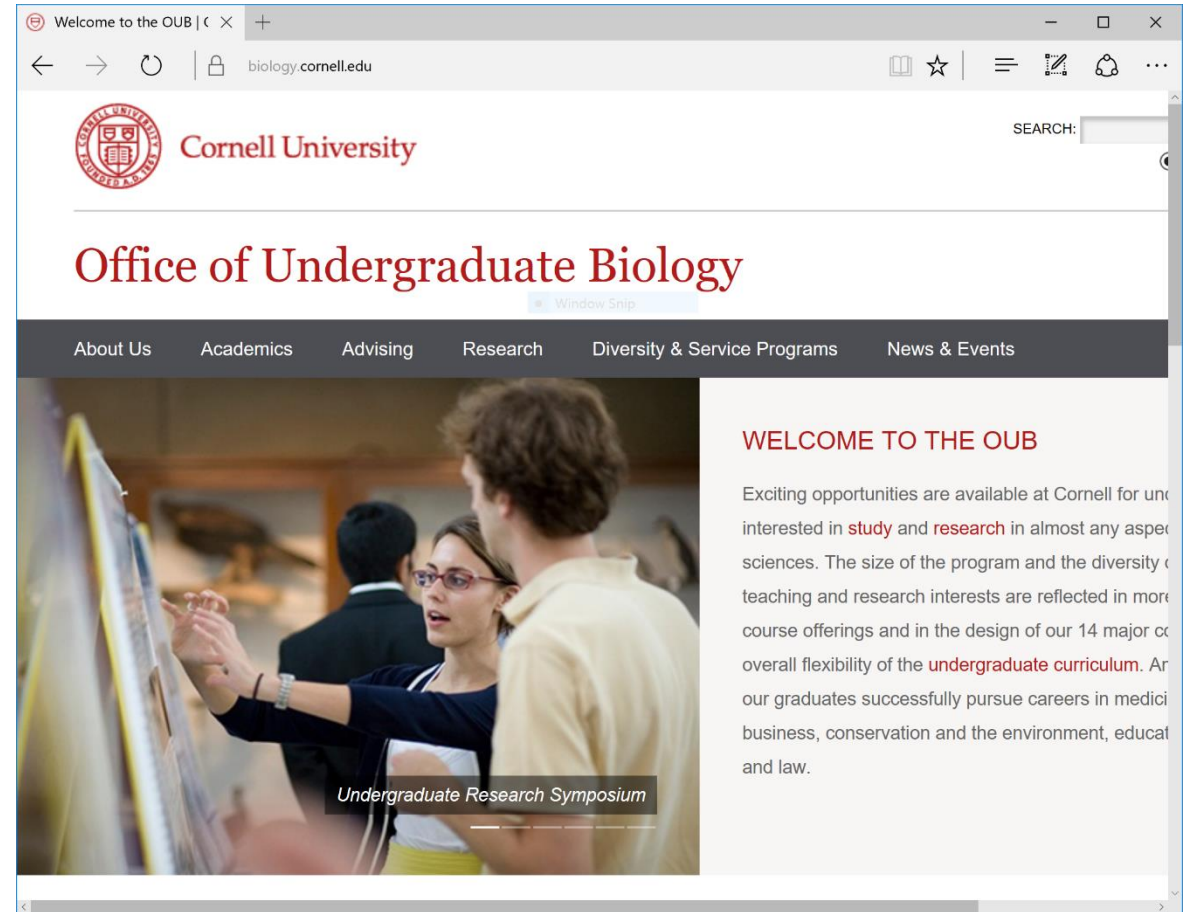

Most are open to you, regardless of where you live. Register for them just as you would for any other courses.

Learning Where You Live
 2016-2017

Want to explore an interesting subject in an informal and convenient setting?
 Want to get to know a fantastic, friendly professor?
 Still looking for an extra credit or two?

DURING ORIENTATION
 Social Sciences Center, 110 Thurston Hall
 Learning Where You Live, 110 Thurston Hall
 Social Sciences Center, 110 Thurston Hall
 Learning Where You Live, 110 Thurston Hall

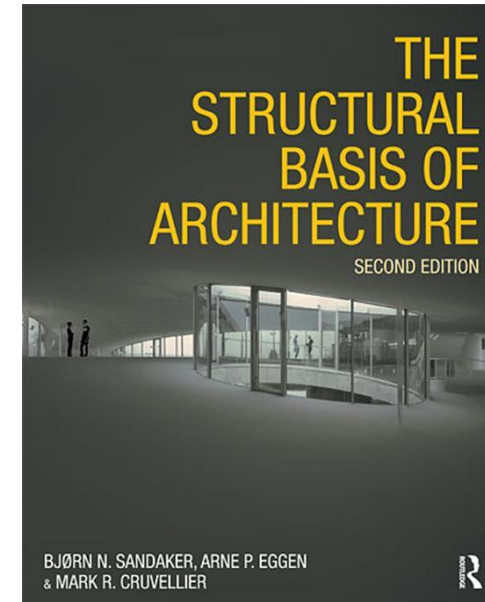

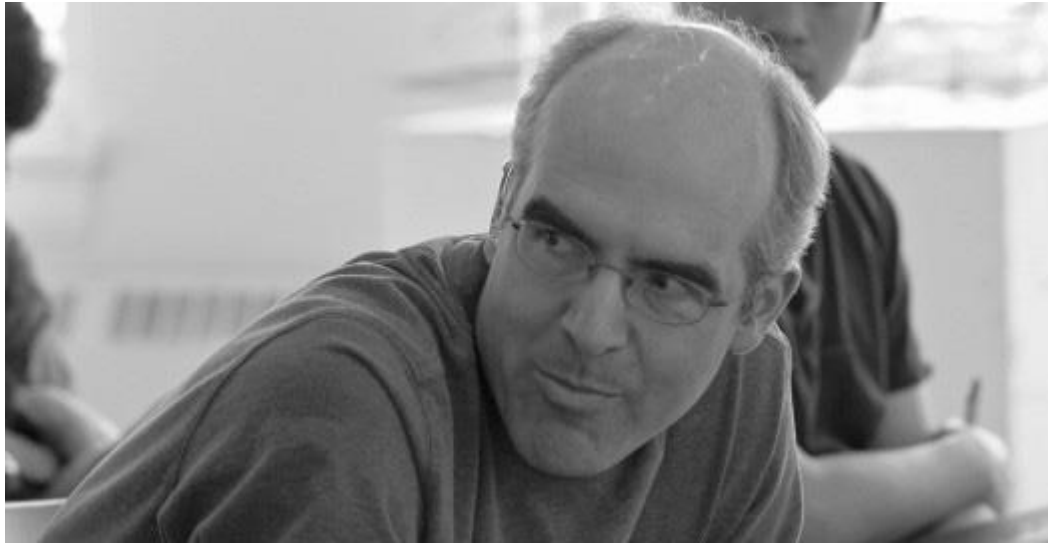

Bonnie Comella

Director of Advising, Office of Undergraduate Biology

Assistant Dean and Director of Advising, Arts and Sciences (Starting February 1)

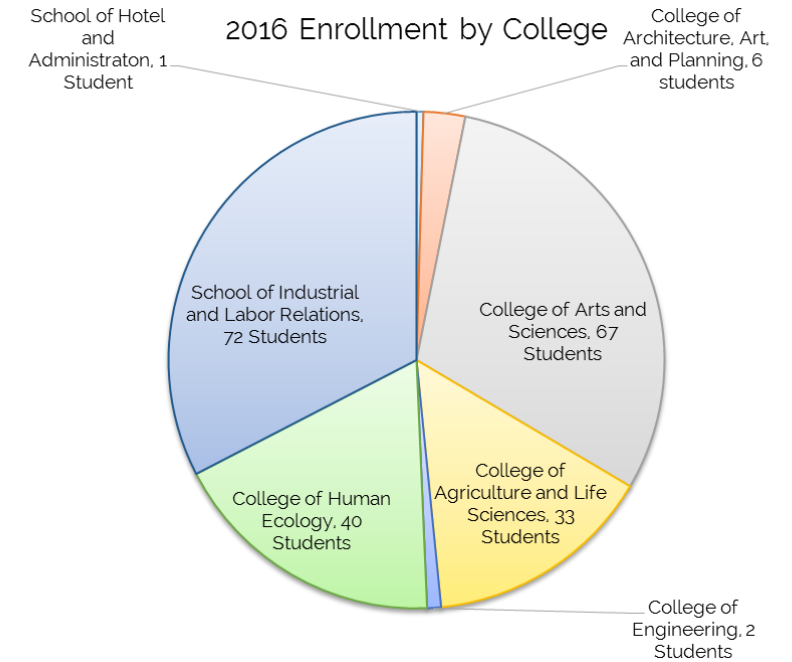

Professor Mark Cruvellier
Department of Architecture

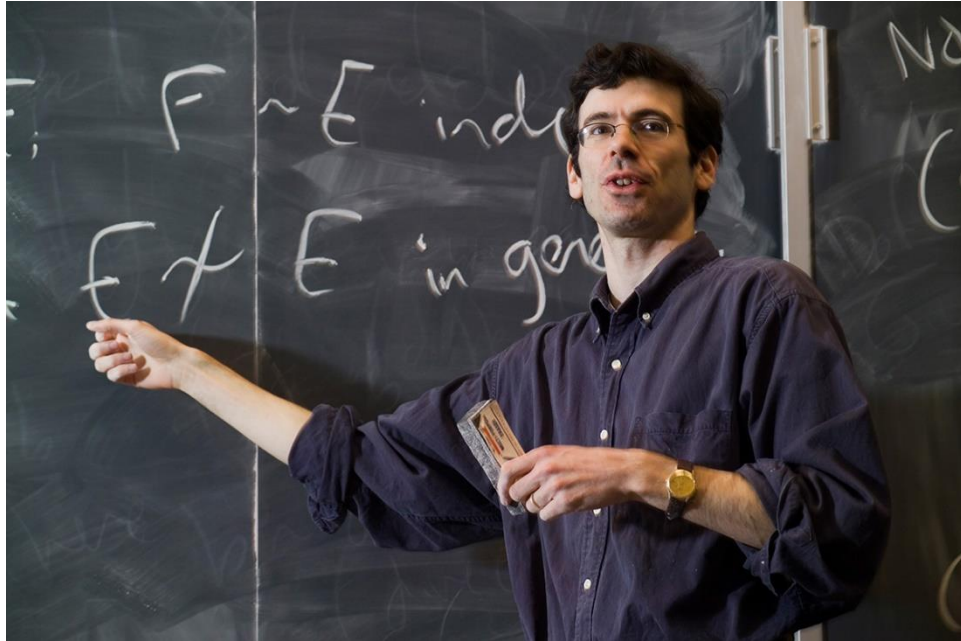

Professor Anna R. Haskins
Department of Sociology

- ◉ Social Inequality (SOC/PAM 2208 and DSOC 2090)
- ◉ Comparative Social Inequalities (DSOC 3700 and SOC 3710)
- ◉ Race and Public Policy (PAM 3370 and SOC 3370)
- ◉ Families and Social Inequality (PAM 4470 and SOC 4470)
- ◉ Economic Analysis of the Welfare State (ILRLE 4426 and ECON 3450)
- ◉ Managing Diversity: Policies and Practices (ILROB 6260)

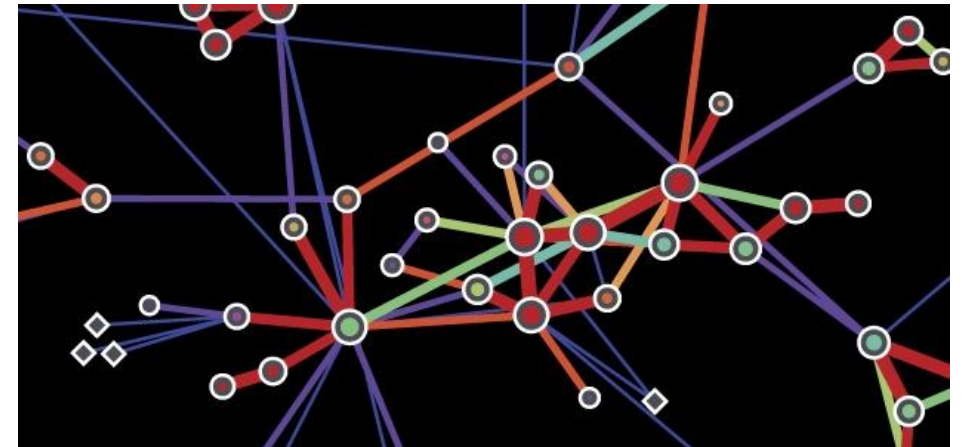

Networks

Economics 2040 / Sociology 2090 /
Computer Science 2850 / Information Science 2040

Professor Jon Kleinberg

Department of Computer Science

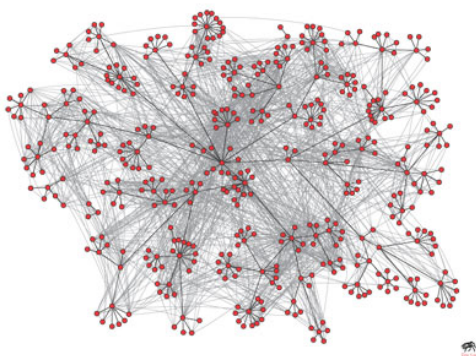

Department of Information Science

Networks (ECON 2040/SOC 2090/CS 2850/INFO 2040)

High-school dating
(Bearman et al.)
(Image by Mark Newman)

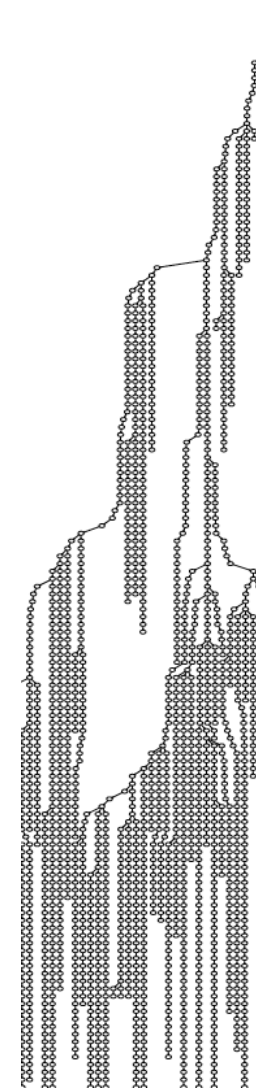

Corporate e-mail communication
(Adamic et al.)

Networks

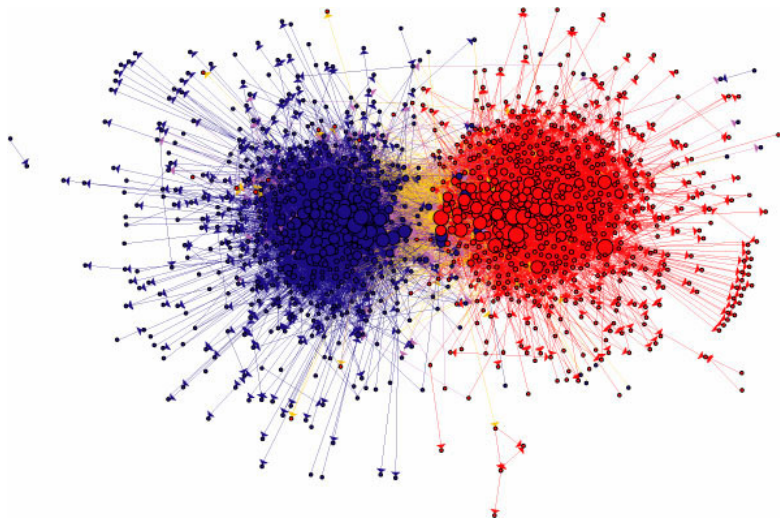

Mon-Wed-Fri 11:15-12:05

A course on how the social, technological, and natural worlds are connected, and how the study of networks sheds light on these connections. Topics include: how opinions, fads, and political movements spread through society; the robustness and fragility of food webs and financial markets; and the technology, economics, and politics of Web information and on-line communities.

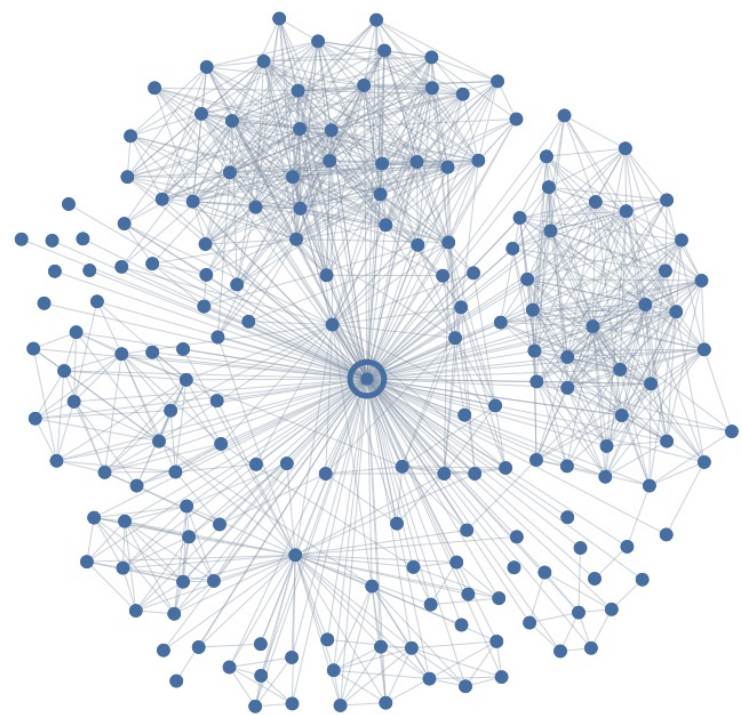

Meets Arts & Sciences SBA distribution and Engineering Liberal Studies SBA distribution.

Anti-war chain letter
(Liben-Nowell et al.)

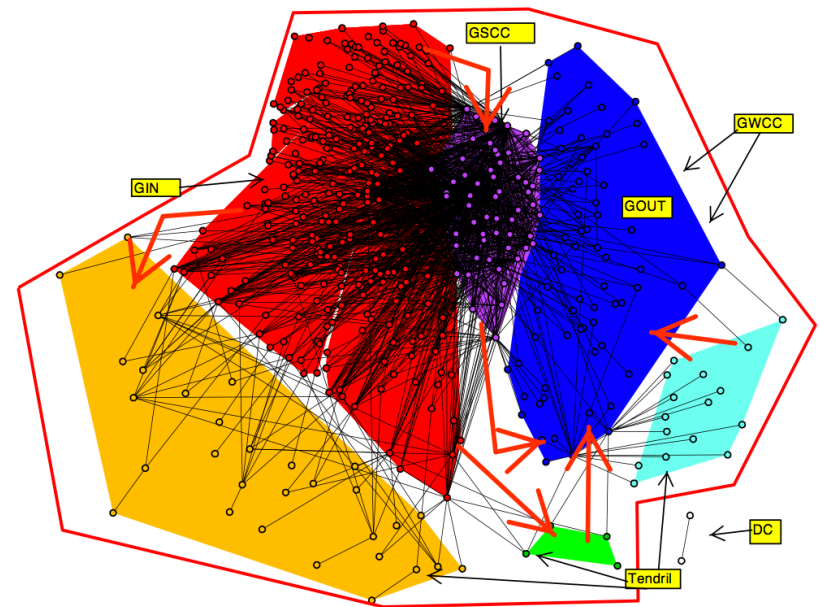

Political blogs shortly before the 2004 election
(Adamic and Glance, 2005)

Facebook user's friends (Marlow et al, 2009)

Aerial photo of traffic
(Chan, 2009)

Loans among financial institutions
(Bech and Atalay, 2008)

Get Out of Your College!

*Encouraging Students to Make the Most of
Their Cornell Experience*

January 31, 2017

Organizers: Charles Van Loan (Dean of Faculty) and Rebecca Stoltzfus (Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education)