Feedback from colleagues is that individual colleges should be allowed to do what they feel is best for their college.
PP positions are in CBE and all PPs bring their unique expertise and industrial experience to our students and they typically teach the capstone project for seniors besides other courses.
This is a bad idea. It adds more to the hierarchy, a scholarly pecking order or sorts. It's a enough we have: Full Professor Associate Assistant The Practice Adjunct Enough, enough, if someone is hired it should be as Assistant. This section of the system was not broken, why try to fix it?
